

LITTLE ROCK NINE

In 1957, this group of Black teens helped desegregate public schools in the U.S. South. After enrolling in an all-white school in Little Rock, Arkansas, they faced angry protestors and unfair treatment. Their bravery, along with the efforts of many other Black children and community members, helped in the fight for racial equality.

